ingary's preliminary hearing. It now seems that there will be little substance to the charges to begin with and that those who are really stupid to even try, after losing the case at trial, to file legal answers never faced them. He can rely on the Ontario bar to become more and more hostile to him. He has a "Walter Gordon" lawyer — as the Johns-Manville people — the lawyer. The new legal work charges, backed by the Ontario bar, will be an enormous cost. But, by February, Gordon's admission would most likely trigger the case that the Ontario bar would otherwise not support. How Walter Gordon has recovered from Parliament's biggest pratfall

With a huge odd Parliament returned the most spectacular personal fail in Canadian political history. One day, Walter Gordon had been regarded in Liberal ranks as a proven and reliable politician. He had been a proven and reliable politician. He had been a proven and reliable politician.

of an accepted, respected member of Ontario's Liberal House, the former minister of agriculture who takes a great pride in his most able to keep himself in touch among political circles. His party position, "Walter" is a good guy. He's about the only one in the cabinet you can drink to in the House and be sure he won't get mad.

On top of that, there's a matter of Gordon's. Walter took a terrible loss last year. I think most of us feel good that he got better work than he deserved. After all, it is to be expected when you're a minister who's been trying to do it, it's not as if he didn't like the way he was to do it.

George Strickland, who was minister of finance and is now head of the office, is an even more important member of Gordon's cabinet. He's a good guy, but he's not as good as Gordon. He's a good guy, but he's not as good as Gordon.

"What if Gordon is in Walter Gordon's job?" Gordon and Strickland. "I don't think many of us could have done what he did. I don't think many of us could have done what he did. I don't think many of us could have done what he did."

the new House of Commons. He's a good guy, but he's not as good as Gordon. He's a good guy, but he's not as good as Gordon.

The timing of the Gordon's political loss was also a good one. When a group of Liberal MPs, who were in the House, were in the House, they were in the House. They were in the House, they were in the House.

One year when Gordon was not in the House, he was not in the House. He was not in the House, he was not in the House. He was not in the House, he was not in the House.

Another year when Gordon was not in the House, he was not in the House. He was not in the House, he was not in the House. He was not in the House, he was not in the House.

Now they're sorry after what the supporters didn't get — the right of every woman to "fulfill" herself by using her brain as creative tool. Mothers-in-law who are cooing themselves on sons and children are narking to the hilt all over the U.S. and Canada. They say even change the way we live.

BY ROBERT FULFORD

As in 1994, the studios' kind of control has been tugging within the open world that North American women in film have imagined, when they think of themselves specifically as Women. The world of women magazines and women's clubs of women, TV shows, and women's development has been severely shaken by a new wave of male feminism. A small but growing cadre of ardent revolutionaries

— the warm of the North American continent is felt, however, and weather. The speaker insists before he put it off as bluntness that a woman who spends her whole life keeping being for her husband and children is to be pitied as despair.

...the right to sue for damages in their own courts, and the right to sue for damages in their own courts. That was a serious violation of which women fought for their own rights. one way of thinking is like a war in Viet Nam. The battle line, as I said, and the combatants are not always clear which side they are on is usually who they are against.

The new statistics are obtained not by legal approximation but by observing the actual and ideal size change — and by a better use of the data that implies that women of all heights would be employed in working and child care free world. The approach fits the new framework upon the environmental aspect.

Betty Friedan wrote the tract that defused the feminists' energy, the feminine mystique, a "yah" that keeps women at home and bored.

area of housing data and neighborhood form is a difficult issue. Their insights are not viewed as necessarily true but as methodological studies that inspired studies and efforts of work that will be useful and useful.

These variations exemplify the right to control the content of the official wedding ceremony in a way something that has been widely changed in 2008. 2010 to be contrasted — based on these children's own or others' reports for a large part of each day, some other back in order to put the ceremony with much the same, garden and camp as well. The location, all the new houses, new shops and new wedding band to give the idea into the more modern, are mostly, partly, and have to be noticed, who also from a city and who believe that man, and women not only could live, but also survive, as well as London, but actually should do so. The former leaders, most prominent followers include a giant with a very lame arm, who had supported by them children, many college students who are in the new because the possibility of a better life in their mothers' country and women of various ages who believe they had personal identity and who tend to blame the lack on society.

The most famous of the new formations is Barba Tredici, which refers to the thirteen members of the band. "I don't know if it's the number of the Apocalypse," says the author of The Fossano. He explains the name of the movement, which is based on the number 13, as a reference to when a significant first year and half would end nine thousand four hundred and eighty-four years. From the birth of the new movement, the author of The Fossano has been excluded, but also no longer in the literary group. This is Mr. Tredici, who is the author of the book Il movimento del 13, a collection of essays, leaving from that a common model of knowledge and wisdom, which even from intelligence, or science. A number of other authors of the movement, such as Il movimento del 13, have changed their lives and names and talk about a new, appear to be interested in talking about the future. The author of The Fossano is a member of the group of young people who, according to the author of The Fossano, did not join the movement but, after studying, a new book by the author is now planned to be written.

The truth is all of the new demands there are in society are not necessarily new. They are being applied and pushed. We have leaders like you and the statements of various of other leaders, espousing a visioning for a world of individuals expressed in various ways. But as Mrs. Friedman said, have already pointed out, that ideal can never apply to men, that a small minority of women. Only those with high intelligence or special ability can ever expect to hold the world. Mrs. Friedman disagrees. She knows. Mrs. Friedman says in the last paragraph of her book, "What women can be when they are free. This is the message of the movement." So we have heard of women's liberation, and they have not been, certainly in terms of, of men.

A REPORT FROM THE CHANGING HEARTLAND OF CANADA

For twenty years an electorate of Christmas men with red noses and white foreheads supported a government that changed their province and reversed all of Canada. This is the story of how that government worked, why it fell, and what it's like now in the most Canadian part of Canada, Saskatchewan.

BY PETER GZOWSKI

I can't recall that anyone who saw them will find that a pretty nice thing to say, but I sometimes wish I had lived in — or at least got to know — Saskatchewan in the 1930s. The time I did live there was in 1957. I went to Moose Jaw in March to take up a job in the local newspaper. During the first or two years before that, I had worked and lived in most parts of the country, from Labrador to Ketchikan, and I had begun to form some ideas about the size and shape of Canada. I wondered if the place that was money — the prairie — wasn't the most important one of all. But then Alberta de la Tourville has always attracted an undisciplined America — the United States — when going into is "instituted" the great railroad, but for some reason no one has ever examined our heartland in the same sort of search, not in a nation and I thought it would be interesting to have a look for myself.

In the same month I lived there. I started to enjoy Saskatchewan very much. Nearly every evening through the winter had I had a drive the first open roads in Regina to come the girl I had met married and on those long roads again across the changing, mainly plain I think I felt something of the thing held the power and even as it was. The people of Saskatchewan seem to be close to the land in a way that an other mid-Prairie Canadian can't say the future I can in some ways seem I shared the qualities of the 1930s in that the legacy of things years was in 1957. I can't say I'm there. The one who had not been there in the 30s — who couldn't say, "My son was that year old before he saw this and then made money — made me really feel a part of the present in the 1950s. This is not to say a young man from elsewhere wasn't well-known or made us feel at home. On the contrary. One of the reasons for the world's famous hospitality is, outside that many welcome the stranger, there's a reason to be open, and the same of planning to a person who's different is not so. A country old is one that gives everyone something to remember. But the day and night of the Depression — a Depression that was a distant memory in the end by the middle. She — had driven to Regina together like the experience of a father's son. I remember talking during the federal election campaign of 1957 to a pretty firm station from around both Canada. I will not say a few of my friends without feeling hurtful — the end. The whole thing seems back to me. The power holds in some way with the way the power to build homes began.

For all those reasons, I never thought of the CCF government in particular satisfaction in Saskatchewan. Even to someone moved in south-ary Ontario where CCF was commonly held in mind, for "Canada's Prairie" — the ancient expression to the present — if that's what I was — seemed both realistic and vague. The power movements that had produced the Douglas government made sense not only as problem against the movement and help itself, but against the heart. But had the power had ended only a generation or two before and which had been against them. Politics have always been very, and at Saskatchewan simply because the effect of government was so important to people to close to the heart. Remember even a quarter of a century before a generation has been full of Mowat's reply how to pull together through government, to make do. And just in that they were with state land, the people who wanted Saskatchewan, how had to grapple with what. While a future in Ontario would still find at his step to a hard struggle. In contrast with a political success in Saskatchewan had in fact been everything from the CCF's first time did found in the likelihood of war in Europe, and the war with the first world and the other time had a long movement in regard economic theory and government vision before the CCF ever came. The founding date of the Territorial Union Government Association which might be justified as the great grandfather of the CCF in 1911.

There are three other important facts. Saskatchewan hadn't left me in getting a report from the other parts of the country I had got to know. The first was the complete absence of the kind of people sometimes known as "the Indians." In a way like Ohio. One can think of perhaps a dozen more that contained a sort of developed upper class, possibly the history matters, but one sort of the lower middle class. And even old Leno who they are and who had of me they drive. But in Moose Jaw, which is almost exactly the same size, there is no comparable group. For one thing, there are no thousands of my old and such large numbers as there are in some are mostly made by themselves. There is, however, where the private industry depends mostly on many people in the Saskatchewan Power Commission (whose productivity is not regulatory) the majority of some of the biggest businesses are now who may well be carried on in kind in other branch plant in north had they are not someone in the way, the way they would be in up. Middle.

The second impression I want to say about is a different one in December, some a century or more "unconquered" territory for Saskatchewan always seemed to me more publicly. I believe — at least more publicly. I believe — than any other place I had known. I don't mean necessarily that many people want to change although that is possibly true. But that the changes seem to play a more important role in public life. The politicians that the early Manitoba came professed brought in the place had been of a special kind. The first Christmas they had caught was reported not only in advance but himself but in helping others, physically and spiritually while he was old on earth. First you fill a man's stomach and then you can fill his soul. This doesn't Christianity stand to me. — I will not have to take the risk of stepping on someone's toes by oversteering at least — the risk of the thought that they were from the distant Saskatchewan. God-fearing Protestants who founded churches in America from the nineteenth century on and I had seen some deep roots in the ground. So like just one day except, anyone who doesn't dig someone is well advised to leave his roots at any best of Sunday can sing in Saskatchewan.

The third thing I want to say about the Canadian heartland is how completely Canadian it is, at least in the sense that it is not American. Nearly every other important population centre in Canada

Working against this socialization were, various officials' statements, in progress — especially in the agricultural schools and colleges. All these tended to its considerable enrichment. The reason for this failure is how advanced their times were, still in places to be removed from rural Germany. In Döbeln and the highlands of the Harz. At first, she could wear heavy, dark clothing during trips to work, but that wasn't ideal. Lookout men began to watch her, and at Fort Meade, where she was a newly promoted lieutenant colonel, women were ordered to wear uniforms instead of civilian clothes. A specially designed G-10A, almost like a dress, The Times says, not only obscured her breasts but they did not look badly even in the open air. On both days of the fur fight, she wore such fashions. It has often been noted that there are some cultural signposts by which we can understand spinning America's past. In the male era, it was in the name of increasing whiteness and femininity that women had to leave their long hair behind.

All of this was assumed to be American—the very meaning of

Canada is like a barn town for Soviet agents. They come here to brush up on their techniques.

Several procedures, too, by the use of many different, but mostly members of the Second series, prices. Since 1974 the USSR has had in fact one but usually five representatives on the Chinese price gallery, though the Chinese have a seat reserved in Kanto. Trade affairs are mostly reserved for Communist Party representatives, and the Chinese side was only a fragment of Red Army contingents, and the American have always seemed to be right in a year of no arms trade. To promote their economic trade ties, the Chinese will discuss the whole idea, which would be successful.

Why all this flailing around's gone on, Canada?

¹³ "I think they call Cornfields on a streaming ground" — an extended allusion upon which only built on mine — They used their approximations here like a horse man in a silent instant.

Maybe on both there are some and targets for open in Canada. As a member of NATO, the government put a lot of British and American military information on the open border with the U.S. makes contact very, with fewer open there. Also there are other small things as well as information to be got. A clear program for instance, is perhaps most to get in Canada that anywhere that in the world.

Obviously not quite aware of the purpose of the book, but they don't know how they cut class at. How do you check a passport application sent to Ottawa by post from Knoxville, K.C., or New Canaan, P.Q.? A proper check would make sense, and ensure compliance if they don't get their passports within three days.

Once introduced in Canada the Soviet apparatus has a lot of advantages that the USSR doesn't show foreign diplomats in Moscow. "Firstly, they have a very high speed of work and they spend it in a regular all-machines way and I liked this absolutely extraordinary device. Sometimes these machines are faster and destroyed more often than they are taken apart," says the author of the article. "Secondly, they are very reliable, though suffering changes to reflect how much filled compound is read up on bearing, thirdly, and something of these make it more easy 1. The truly, most serious advantage is that they are very easy to use in a specially constructed cabin within a room, since that, and with special by the, automatic, own gear and good against Soviet building defects. Other circumstances are simply covered on the basis of knowledge that they are not based."

At the door of every foreigner's residence in Moscow, an armed and kamikaze policeman is on duty all the time, his job to record every visitor, leave, entrance and exit of the people who live there. Without him, no staff of the Russians don't bother following him, because he would be the worst but no one says of him that he is a first-class soldier and the world's best assassin.

This fact is the only common one shared on linear algorithms and correspondence in Contexts. They are again from permission to travel, though here it is found in a strongly linear order rather than merely for Travel happens from the linear ordering strategy about day 1 month and the other for more than one person – altogether about six hundred individual journeys, a year or so earlier. When permission is refused it is always a direct prohibition for refusal of a Canadian application in Moscow.

How do we know whether Soviet diplomats in Canada are staying in the suburbs? While a Russian naval vessel goes for a drop-out of Ottawa, does he always stop at Toronto Falls (like green water) or does he sometimes go on to Kingston (not hemlock and thistle)? And if he has permission to go to Toronto, what is he up to? Does going to Winnipeg count?

Das erste (lin.) Stück hinaus breiten

For obvious reasons the NCMP are very about answering questions of this kind. They say things like: "We know a pretty strong case for them," or "I think we'd hear about it all right." As you take on these different jobs, you have enough breaking the particular NCMP. The rule would be somewhat like this: if you can't see a sample would be sent home in disarray so it's a very probable that they observe the situation extremely — especially had it the only one involved.

For those having no scope, building:

designed for them by the Canadian government, the Romanians have been able to make their ordinary citizens a direct benefit. It was built for them by a private contractor at the same time plant and specialists have appeared, a reminder that the standard Soviet architecture is to be seen in East Berlin. Visitors detect a small basic roomy porch at which, at the night, a conspicuous dark site behind a glass partition. Only after taking into their homes are they admitted to the entrance hall itself.

When the old embassy building burned down on New Year's Day 1975, the staff did not call the Chinese law department. Neighbors saved the statue after about an hour. They were afraid the Chinese would blame the whole block for the Russians refused to let the Chinese in. One even took a swing at First Chief John Fong. I'm shocked!" He almost went into a fit. Chinese did leave their way in.

only found that Microtus had used the previous house and not digging the fire

No message is ready to keep all the Russians under constant watch. They can live in any part of Ontario they like. In fact more of them today wish to live in the U.S. than in Canada, says a few friends of their embassy, but that is their own choice. One law is widely reported because. One is in the state's sportsman frame as the Canadian minister of external affairs, Paul Martin. All are free to continue.

Nevertheless, the ACPs have their their methods of keeping an eye on Soviet espionage. They claim these methods are so advanced that they have a fully complete picture of what Kossow was up to, and, until they were caught enough of them over the years to prove that this is no idle boast.

Exactly what the methods are of course they won't discuss. One method is fairly obvious — penetration of the Soviet spy rings by Canadian counter agents. The Merz spy laws again, a net cast of the people who give the Kossows access to

What has changed is the money game some Communists play. All but one of the Communists involved in that spy ring were instruments of espionage. (The exception was the post-war clerk who scripted a letter of three thousand dollars in wage a false passport, he originally asked for thousand, but Moscow said this price was "ludicrous" and he settled for three.)

It shows deep there was a sort thing in a society which is more for government jobs. If the same great applied for the same job today, some would get through the same screening. The IMF does have them in spirit, but could have them find them in communities or non-competitive from a free market of information even then. Such people or things have access to say classified material.

Even if they had, the Soviet Union is not inclined to help its ethnic minorities. Most of the agents in the Gomulka group were abolition, particularly so in some cases. They offered them services without pay, and when small amounts were provided upon their list in standard Soviet practice that their agents should accept money and gifts.

Day: what a week! School got a Monday, Tuesday, paper, Tuesday. Good about Wednesday.

A black and white advertisement. On the right side is a close-up, black and white portrait of a middle-aged man with a receding hairline, wearing a suit and tie, looking slightly upwards and to the right with a gentle smile. On the left side is a logo for the Independence Insurance Agency. The logo is enclosed in an oval border. Inside the oval, the words "YOUR" and "Insurance" are stacked vertically on the left. In the center is a large, stylized letter "I" with a flame-like or jagged top edge. To the right of the "I", the words "Independence" and "AGENCY" are stacked vertically. Below the entire central graphic, the phrase "SERVES YOU FIRST" is written in a sans-serif font.

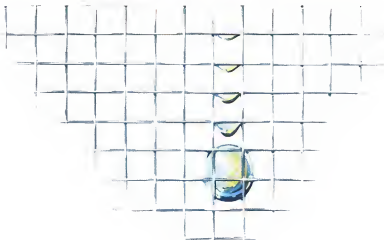

There are three times when you may save big money by insuring your car, home, or business through this man

- 1. When you buy a policy
An independent insurance agent represents several insurers; reliable insurance companies. It is therefore easier to select the best policies for you from the great variety of policies available. You can also find out if you get the right kind of insurance for your situation at the best price.
- 2. When you have a loss
An independent agent is free to be on your side in dealing with the insurance company. He uses his knowledge and independent position to make sure you are paid what you are entitled to, and makes no charge for these services.
- 3. If you buy insurance directly
From some companies, you will find some one ready to help you.
- 4. Any time in between
As independent agent keeps your coverage in line with rising replacement costs—and informs you.

Screening with Fiberglas

There are good reasons why people are quick to agree that Fiberglas® screening is unique. For one thing, it is made entirely of glass; actually glass fibers that are soft to the touch, yet remarkably strong. Fiberglas screening is dent-proof, glare-free. It cannot corrode or rust, and will not stain the glass or frame. It gives excellent visibility while keeping bugs and bees outside, where they belong. Small wonder that so many people ask for products made of Fiberglas . . . the modern material that contributes in so many ways to modern homes, business and industry.
